Title: Edith Hahn Collection, 1915-1997 (bulk 1941-1942)

Extent: 1 boxes (20 folders; 465 documents); 25 microfiche.

Provenance: Edith Hahn-Beer wrote the majority of the letters and postcards to Joseph (Pepi) Rosenfeld. Rosenfeld kept the letters and postcards until Edith and her husband, Fred Beer, retrieved them in the late 1950s. Over the years, she added correspondence from her mother, Klothilde Hahn, and others during World War II and several identification documents and photographs. She added other materials relating to post-war experiences and her book, "Ich Will Leben!", in the 1990s. Dalk Feith, former United States Holocaust Memorial Council member, and Drew Lewis, former United States Transportation Secretary, purchased Hahn's collection during a Sotheby's auction on Dec. 5, 1997 and donated it to the USHMM in 1998.

Biographic/Historical Note: Edith Hahn-Beer (b. Edith Hahn, January 24, 1914, Vienna, Austria) is a survivor of Nazi labor camps in Germany during from 1941 to 1942. Until the Anschluß in 1938, she was a student of law at the University of Vienna. She was forced to discontinue her studies and, in 1939, was forced to move into the Jewish ghetto in Vienna along with their mother, Klothilde Hahn. In April 1941 Edith was forced into a labor camp at a farm in Osterburg, Germany, where she performed agricultural labor. In October 1941, she and other women from the farm camp were taken to a paper carton factory in Aschersleben, Germany, near Leipzig. During her time in these camps, she managed to maintain a steady correspondence with a former law school friend, Joseph "Pepi" Rosenfeld of Vienna. There are some 290 pieces of correspondence in the collection between Edith and Pepi that chronicle her experiences in the camps and his support and encouragement for her. In 1942, the Nazis ordered Edith to report for relocation, but she decided to escape deportation by going underground. She sought the aid of a non-Jewish friend, Christine Margarethe Denner. Denner applied for and received duplicate identification papers for herself for Edith to use while posing as a Christian. Living under her new identity, Edith settled in Munich, Germany, where she worked as a seamstress and nurse. In August 1942 Edith met and fell in love with Werner Vetter, a Nazi. After his divorce from his first wife, Vetter and Edith married in 1943. Their daughter, Angelika Maria (Angela), was born on April 9, 1944. As World War II turned against Germany, Vetter was drafted and soon captured by the Russians and taken to Siberia as a prisoner of war. Edith fled with her infant daughter to the German countryside. After the war, Edith and Werner divorce and he returned to his first wife. Edith became a judge in the Russian Zone of Germany, but eventually fled to England when the Russians pressured her to spy on colleagues. In 1957, Edith married fellow Viennese refugee, Fred Beer. They lived near London until Beer's death in 1984. Before Fred died, he and Edith visited Pepi and retrieved the letters and postcards that she wrote to him while in the labor camps. Joseph (Pepi) Rosenfeld died in the early 1960s. Edith Hahn moved to Israel in 1984 after the death of her husband.

Edith Hahn writes to Joseph (Pepi) Rosenfeld in a letter dated "Samstag Nachmittags" or "Saturday afternoon." Edith describes her living quarters as being simple, but very nice. Leave is only on Saturday from 2 until 6 and Sunday from 9 until 11 and 2 until 6. When mailing a parcel a certificate from the housekeeper is required. In Edith's description she mentions the Frederick Taylor methods of production. Edith says she learns very much about the labor psyche, meaning that the laborers drop their tasks the minute the time is up regardless of whether or not they are finished with the task. Edith feels sorry for the factory worker because he reminds her of a robot. Edith has already experienced several air raids and had to make up for the lost time. Edith asks Pepi not to write an address on his letters because one girl there ended up in a concentration camp due to having an address on a letter. She also asks him not to mail any registered parcels.
