Biographical note / Administrative history

Norbert Wollheim (1913-1998) was born in Berlin. His father was a German Jewish veteran of World War I, and Wollheim was active in the German Jewish Youth Alliance. Nazi anti-Jewish laws led to his expulsion from law studies at the University of Berlin in April 1933. From 1935 through 1938 he worked as a clerk and scientific worker at the ore firm Rawack and Grünfeld AG in Berlin-Charlottenburg. He married Rosa Mandelbrod in May 1938 and was dismissed from his job for racial reasons in September 1938. Between November 1938 and August 1939, he helped arrange and escort twenty transports of Jewish children to safety in Britain. Wollheim continued to work for the Reichsvereinigung der Juden in Deutschland (Union of Jews in Germany).

In 1941 he was drafted to perform forced labor, and in February 1943 he and his family were arrested, and taken to the Grosse Hamburger Strasse assembly center. On March 11th they were deported to Auschwitz, where his pregnant wife and 3-year old son, Uriel, were murdered. Norbert Wollheim was tattooed with prison number 107984, and he was one of the 25,000 Jews who were forced to build a synthetic-rubber plant for I.G. Farben in Auschwitz III-Monowitz (Buna). He survived a death march starting January 18, 1945 that led him from Auschwitz to Gleiwitz, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Czechoslovakia again, and finally to the Heinkel satellite camp of Sachsenhausen-Oranienburg near Berlin at the end of the month. The camp was evacuated on April 20th, and Wollheim fled his SS guards on the night of May 2nd. He was liberated by American troops in Schwerin (Mecklenburg) the next day.

Wollheim did not want to return to Soviet-controlled Berlin, so he moved to Lübeck and helped to organize a community of 800 Jewish displaced persons. He also visited the nearby British-controlled Bergen-Belsen displaced persons camp and organized the Central Committee of Liberated Jews in the British Zone with Joseph Rosensaft. Wollheim married Frieda (Friedel) Senta Löwenberg (1921-1977) a German Jewish woman he had met in Bergen-Belsen, and they had two children, Peter (b. 1948) and Ruth-Evelyn (b. 1950). (After Friedel's passing in 1977, Wollheim married Charlotte Sprung.) In the late 1940s Wollheim appeared as a witness during the Nuremberg trials and at the trial against Nazi sympathizer film director and actor Veit Harlan. In 1951, Norbert Wollheim successfully sued I.G. Farben, arguing that the manufacturer should compensate him for two years' work. The lawsuit opened the way for a settlement with I.G. Farben that established a fund of $6.43 million to compensate other Jewish laborers.

Towards the end of 1950, Wollheim and his family moved to the United States, but they were twice arrested by the immigration authorities, detained on Ellis Island, and threatened with deportation. Finally, in 1952, they were legally admitted to the United States. Wollheim studied accounting at New York University and was granted certification in 1962. He testified in the Frankfurt Auschwitz trials in the mid-1960s. He also played a leading role in the World Federation of Bergen-Belsen Survivors and the American Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors and was a member of the United States Holocaust Memorial Council. He lived with his family in Fresh Meadows, Queens, NY, and had a successful accounting career until his retirement in 1991.

Scope and content of collection

The Norbert Wollheim papers consist of correspondence, photographs, and printed materials documenting Wollheim's prewar family life in Europe, his efforts to receive restitution for his slave labor at I.G. Farben, his immigration to the United States, and his continued work with other Holocaust survivor organizations such as the World Federation of Bergen-Belsen Survivors, the Auschwitz/Buna Memorial, the World Federation of Holocaust Survivors, the United Jewish Appeal, and the World Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors.

Series 1, Life in Europe, primarily documents Norbert Wollheim's life and activities in Europe before his immigration to the United States, including personal and professional correspondence from his years in Lübeck; legal records documenting his efforts to receive restitution for his slave labor at I.G. Farben; subject files about survivor conferences, postwar antisemitism, and emigration to Palestine; publications and clippings documenting Jewish survivor organizations; photographic materials documenting Wollheim's family before the war and political and commemorative events after the war; and personal documents such as identification papers, calendars, and speeches.

Subseries 1, Lübeck correspondence, includes Norbert Wollheim's correspondence from his years in Lübeck after the war. The correspondence documents his postwar activities on behalf of survivors, and related travel, as well as his own marriage and the birth of his children. It includes professional, private, and personal correspondence with officials, aid organizations, friends, and relatives. Correspondents include Hermann Simon, Max Plaut, Karl Marx, Kurt Hecht, Rolf May, Hans and Gretl Royce, his sister and brother-in-law (Bellauer), and Julius Dreifuss.

Subseries 2, Correspondence and related records regarding I.G. Farben, consists of legal records, correspondence, and clippings related to the slave labor Norbert Wollheim performed for I.G. Farben at Auschwitz during the war and his efforts to receive compensation after the war.
