Introduction

In the moment of the attack on Poland in September 1939, the Nazi policy of total discrimination of Jews and aiming at removing them from the borders of the Third Reich adapted the new stage. Already during the September campaign, the first steps were taken to displace Jews from the Polish territories, which were planned to be incorporated to Reich. At the same time, it was planned to establish separate quarters (Juedische Wohnbezirke) in some of towns or cities, to be inhabited solely by Jews. Those ghettos were to be inhabited not only by the Jews once living a given town or city, but they were also planned to be populated by people living in other centers, where no separate Jewish quarters were planned to be established. Already before the resettlement to ghettos, the Jews had come within special regulations which would limit their basic rights: a liberty to migrate, having a property, etc. Since November 23, 1939, Jews were forced to wear bands with a David's star. The first ghetto was established in Piotrków Trybunalski in October 1939, the next was in Radomsko (November 1939)¹. It was decided to establish the Jewish quarter in Łódź in December. Most of the ghettos were established in 1940. The Warsaw ghetto was the biggest (established on October 2, 1940), where approx. 400,000 people found place on the area of about 307 hectares (in January 1941). In early 1941, also the ghettos in Krakow and Kielce were set up (March 1941), and, after the outbreak of the war with the USSR, in Białystok, Lvov, Vilno, Stanisławów, Drohobycz, Równe and other places of Eastern Poland.

Altogether, approx.. 400 ghettos used to exist on the Polish soil.

Since 1941, minor ghettos became liquidated and the Jews were resettled to major centers.

Also the Jews from Germany and Austria became gradually resettled to the ghettos located in Poland.

The ghetto administration was in the hands of Judenrat (Jewish Councils, the Councils of the Elderly), appointed and totally dependent on the German authorities. In bigger ghettos the administration of Jewish Councils was well dealiasoped and ranged to all crucial sectors of life. It was responsible for a supple of work force, levying tributes for an occupier but also distribution of food, social welfare, health care, keeping the quarter clean, etc. German authorities also ordered the Councils to establish order forces, whose task was to watch over the execution of the orders of Jewish and the occupier's administration.

Jewish quarters became separated from the remaining parts of a town or city and their dwellers were prohibited to leave ghettos without permission under the threat of death penalty. Major ghettos were surrounded by walls (e.g. Warsaw) or wire entanglements. The contact with outer world was solely through the separate and thoroughly guarded passages. At the beginning, ghetto dwellers were enfeebled mostly by hard conditions of life: density of population, poverty resulting from resettlement, minimum chance to earn money, beggarly wages, very limited rations of food which made 25% of the rations of Polish dwellers or the German one (8%), woefully sanitation and the like. Practically, save the ghetto Litzmanstadt, Germans failed to isolate Jewish quarters in full. Most of the ghettos dealiasoped smuggling with Polish quarters, focused mainly on food products which mostly ran short in closed quarters. Lange ghettos dealiasoped cultural and political life, self-help organization operated there, children and youth were educated, clandestine newspapers and book were published. Jewish and Polish underground organizations (e.g. in in Warsaw and Krakow) contacted with each other. Almost 25% of ghetto dwellers died or became executed. In Warsaw itself, approx.. 96,000 people died from November 1939 through July 1942².

First mass liquidation operations were conducted by Germans in summer 1941 on the eastern territories, just after the outbreak of war with the USSR. Since the end of 1941, mass extermination of the ghetto population in the separated death camps. The first one started in Chełmno on Ner, the next ones in Bełżec (March 1942), Sobibór (May 1942) and Treblinka (July 1942). The people from the ghettos located on the Polish soil as well as throughout the entire occupied Europe were also delivered and put to death in concentration camps: Auschwitz-Birkenau, Majdanek, Stutthof and elsewhere. The biggest deportation had place in the Warsaw ghetto in the period from July through September 1942 (above 300 thousand people were transported to Treblinka). The ghettos organized armed resistance, which particularly manifested during the liquidation operations, e.g. in Wilno, Warsaw and Białystok. The uprising had a widest range in Warsaw (April-May 1943) and in Białystok (August 1943). In the years of 1942-1944, Germans successfully liquidated the ghettos, a/o in Pińsk (October 1942), in Terezin (January 1943), in Krakow (March 1953), in Warsaw (April-May 1943), in Lvov (June 1943), in Sosnowiec (August 1943), in Mińsk and Wilno (September 1943), in Riga (November 1943), in Kowno (July 1944) and in Łódź (August 1944).

Archives related to ghettos

While liquidating ghettos, Germans were systematically destroying all archival documentation in order to slur the traces of their crimes. They particularly strived for liquidating archival materials made out by Jewish Councils. Attempts to rescue endangered documentation and collecting materials about German crimes were taken by individuals and groups in various ghettos, sometimes long before the total extermination of the given Jewish community. In the Warsaw ghetto, already in fall 1940, it was the Emanuel Ringelblum's team - Oneg Szabat, that conducted documentary works. Similar operations, mostly on smaller scale, were undertaken in other places as in Białystok, Łódź, Piotrków and Radomsko. In ghetto Litzmannstadt, the chairman of the Council of the Eldest, Chaim Rumkowski joined the documentation team, and established a special archive, where he was collecting official and private files to document the life of the Jewish quarter and its dwellers³.

Survived documentation concerning the ghettos can be divided into four basic groups: the files of the Nazi occupier, administration files of the Jewish authorities (Jewish Councils'), the files of Jewish institutions and social organizations, and the private files of Jews. The materials of civil and military authorities were incorporated to the files of German authorities. The group of civil authorities contains a sub-group of archival materials which is made out not only by the occupier, but also by the Polish offices controlled by the German authorities, like municipal and communal governments on the territory of the General Government. The first group also contains the documentation related to the police, administration of ghettos, labor camps, concentration camps, etc. The group of files made out by Jews contain the materials of the ghettos administration, as well as, in less degree, the documents related to the underground activities. Materials made out by individuals also occur in different collections, but they mainly refer to Jewish people, therefore they form a separate group of files in the collections relating to ghettos. Only in few collections can we find a variety of survived archival materials. One of the best and the largest one is the archive concerning the ghetto Litzmanstadt held by the State Archive in Łódź⁴ and in the small collection in the JHI Archive⁵. Archival materials concerning bigger ghettos as e.g. the one of Piotrków⁶, Warsaw⁷, or Krakow⁸. The files of various Jewish institutions, such as the Jewish Self Help⁹ or „Centos”¹⁰, AJDC¹¹ are very valuable sources of materials concerning the ghetto on the territory of GG. The archives of those institutions survived mainly in the Archive of JHI, as well as in other collections¹².

Different official documents and other materials related to ghettos on the Polish soil are in the holding the Ringelblum Archives in the Archive of JHI. In the Archive of JHI there are materials related to the ghettos and camps in the following places¹³ (underlined items have been included in the present inventory – see as below):

Description of the collection and principles of its arrangement.

The collection of materials related to the ghettos located throughout Central-East Europe consists of remnant materials. On one hand, due to its subject, it forms a whole concerning the fate of Jewish population in this part of Europe – mainly on the Polish soil; on the other, we can see distinctive features – the files related to various geographical regions, towns, offices, organizations and people. Also each of the mentioned there groups of archival materials has a slightly different story. In many cases, during the recent rearrangement, the fate of the part of documentation couldn't be found out, especially in case of single documents. Some of the materials were withdrawn from the then existing unarranged collections. Lots of documents were incorporated to the holding of the JHI Archive donated by private individuals. Some of the documents were apparently collected by CŻKH. However, the lack of appropriate documentation makes the identification of the provenance of most of the files difficult.

As for geography, the prevailing part of the collection relates to the ghettos situated on the territories that used to belong to Poland during the inter-war period. But there are some exceptions: single documents from Kowno or Terezin. The biggest collections are: collection of materials related to the history of Jews in Łódź 1939-1944, which include vast fragments of files of the Ghetto Administration (Gettoverwaltung) and Der Älteste der Juden in Getto Litzmannstadt¹⁷. Other collections are much smaller – they refer to the Warsaw and Krakow ghettos, but with a valuable personal documentation, particularly from Krakow. As for the materials from minor centers, the most remarkable are the files of the Jewish Council in Staszów, mainly those of the Sanitary/Health Commission with its numerous name lists. There are also very interesting record books of the ghetto dwellers and a very valuable cash book of the Jewish Council, both from the Modliborzyce ghetto. We also have a record of the ghetto dwellers from the town of Końskie. There are remnants of card files of the selected categories of people that survived, e.g. applications for ID cards from Kamiensk, a collection of death cards (certificates) from Rzeszów, cards of camp prisoners from the camp in Zwierzyniec. In case of the majority of the town or city dwellers, only single documents survived, most of them of a private character: membership cards, certificates, and the like. Such interesting cases are the documents from the rural ghetto of Wola Wereszchyńska (the county of Włodawa) in the Lublin province.

A minor part of the material doesn't refer directly to any particular ghetto, e.g. personal questionnaires for the prisoners from Zwierzyniec camp. There are very few documents coming from the so-called „Aryan side”, of the people who succeeded to escape from the ghetto and used to hide beyond its boundaries. Documentation of this kind is available in the records related to Warsaw.

Printed blank forms of the State Facility for Mentally Ill Patients in Kobierzyn may arouse some doubts. There was no ghetto in Kobierzyn, however there were Jews there (about 90 people), who had been sent to Otwock to the so-called Zofiówka, a mental clinic near Otwock in September 1941 and then murdered in the death camp of Treblinka on August 19, 1942 in Treblinka¹⁸. It was impossible to state if the names on the forms used to belong to the patients of the facility or to the individuals who were to pay some money as a donation for the hospital.

Considering that a part of the collection had been already arranged before and had their own call Nos., it has been decided to keep them with description of „Old call No”. The collection has been arranged in alphabetical and geographical order. Within individual collections/records, the files have been arranged as follows: the files of German administration, the files of Jewish administration (Jewish Councils), the files of Jewish institutions and social organizations as well as private files of Jews. The collection is regarded as an open record, that can be gradually supplemented with new acquisitions – new archival units that will bear successive call Nos.

Polish and German are the languages that prevail in the files of the collection. Most of the documents survived in generally good technical condition, however some of them require conservation.

Having been rearranged, the collection consists of 32 records in 171 archival units of the volume of approx. 26 running meters of files (including some 25 running meters belong to card files and personal cards).

¹⁸ Remaining patients had been murdered in the camp of Birkenau even earlier (537) (June 23, 1942).

Description of files in the inventory

As need arose, some collections of files were additionally preceded by additional archival information. The very description of the archival unit in the inventory consists of two segments. It starts with the general characteristics of the given group of files. The second segment consists of the merits of files, e.g. minutes, reports, name files, correspondence, etc. In some cases, supplementary information relating to its content was given in parentheses. As for external description of the materials, there are: the first and the last dates of documents in the given archival unit, way of recording (manuscript, typescript, photocopy), the language, form of keeping them (loose or bound files), number of pages in each unit and eventually remarks about the condition of survived files. In case of the materials already arranged in the past, their old call Nos. were quoted.

Finding aids

For the files, the index of persons has been introduced which will include both the selected archival units and the content of the very inventory. For some documents information bases including the most important personal data bases that occur in the files have been made out.

The works on the inventories of the Collection of documents could be conducted in the years of 2008-2009 thanks to the financial subsidy of the Claims Conference.

²³ Most of the prints were signed by the first and last name.

A record book of the ghetto located in the town of Końskie inhabitants survived, made out probably in the 2nd half of 1941 and supplemented within 1942. Most of the records were made by the same person while the supplements by several individuals. The book looks like an alphabetic thumb-indexed not-book to the card file of the ghetto inhabitants (families – we know nothing about their fate. In the printed form of the book there are the following items: item No, last and first (eventually middle) name, names of parents, birth date, the date of arrival to Końskie, occupation, address, card file No, remarks. Not all of the above data were placed on the card. Most of the missing items refer to the date of arrival to Końskie, parents' names and occupation. Birth date is also missing in many cases. Sometimes additional data occur, such as mother's maiden name where the parents' names were recorded, a date of death or information about the leaving of the town. Dates of birth are sometimes limited to the year. The book is arranged in alphabetical order, however not within a particular letter. The families were recorded together as a whole. There are also mistakes in case of married women who were recorded under their maiden names. The fate of the book after the liquidation of the ghetto remains partly unknown. It is likely, that after the Holocaust, the book was found by the Końskie dwellers. Survived notes put in the manuscript (after 1945) witness that the book used to be in the hands of Zenon Grabarczyk (born on April 17, 1924), the son of Antoni, living in Końskie, in 4 Pocztowa St., signed it many times (pages 162, 167, 185, 231, 261). Then the book would probably be used by the Zenon's daughter (?), Helena Grabarczyk as a toy. She also let her signature in it (p 141). Before the book became possessed by the JHI Archive, it was seriously damaged. First of all, several (?) dozen pages have been torn out; they contained the registration of people whose names started from A-C letters. As for the letter C, 19 pieces of registration remained out of 229. Also the 1st page of registration starting from the letter D (altogether 30 people) was torn out. We can find minor damages throughout further part of the document. Card 86 was partly damaged while the cards: 172a, 201a, 244a, 244b are missing in total. There are stamps (ink prints) of the Council of the Eldest remaining in two places in w Końskie (cover - illegible) and on card 155.

Call No 218

²⁴ The data of that archival unit were recorded in 2008 r. to the electronic database available in the Archive of JHI.

Survived collection comes from the primary Archive of the Community only partially. Some of documents went through the GG office in Krakow, e.g. the Communal report from September 15,1939 to September 30,1940 (a. u. 4). Some of the files were likely to be mixed with the files of the Starost of the city of Krakow collection. Private files related to the Jews from Krakow usually come from various sources. Alike other occupational collections, a part of materials from Krakow used to collected by Central Jewish Historical Commission after the war.

Modliborzyce Call No 256

The main record of Jews in Modliborzyce has been made out in Polish language in printed books containing following blank spaces: 1) first and last name; 2) names of the parents; 3) occupation; 4) date of birth; 5) citizenship; 6) „unless a permanent dweller, where did he/she came from ?”; 7) date of arrival; 8) references (documents) that were the basis of particular entry; 9) date of a record of departure and a place of departure ; 10) remarks. Most of the people were registered in the five initial blank spaces, sporadically in further ones. In space 10 there is sometimes a note of a death of a given person. In space 5, only the GG was written. Birth dates were often limited to the year and the hand which made that entry seems to be the different from the one which filled other blank spaces. Sometimes there are other data as marriages, deportation, departure, etc. There is a pencil information on the inserted leaf: „643 people, as advised to the Starost on October 1, (19)41” in volume “A”. It is difficult to state the time of entries to the record. Main entries come from the 2nd half of 1940 through early 1941. Last entries come from September 1942 (cards 69, 79), e.g. on card 79 after Sept. 27, 1942. Individual families were rather registered on separate sheets of paper, starting from the eldest through the youngest. What draws attention is few records of babies born after 1939. The book has been filled in by several people. The first one made the majority of records in characteristic blue ink. The entries has been made by several people. They stop at the beginning of 1941. Successive supplement have been already made by several people. The volume „B” started to be filled in in early 1941. There are no the same registration of a person who made most of the registration to „A”, however other hand occurs simultaneously in both manuscripts. Both registers remained in good condition, without damages and losses of text. The third register was made out in 1942 in German language and has the following blank spaces: first name, last name, age, acquired profession and practiced occupation. There is a pressed stamp: „Judenrat in Modliborzyce” on p. 2. The fourth document that survived in the collection is a cash book with entries starting from January to September 1942. The last entry was dated on Sept. 29, 1942, shortly before the liquidation of the Modliborzyce ghetto. Described documents were transferred to JHI Archive by Rafał Imbro on Jan. 4, 2008.
