Those records later were deposited in the National Archives of Hungary, and the National Archives of Hungary transferred them back to the Jewish Museum and Archives of Hungary in the 1990s. The originals of the documents microfilmed for the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum International Archival Programs Division constitute now the collection of the Jewish Museum and Archives of Hungary.

Recollections. DEGOB Protocols (Holokauszttal kapcsolatos, máshova nem sorolt iratok Visszaemlékezések DEGOB-jegyzőkönyvek)
The Jewish Museum and Archives of Hungary holds one of the greatest collections of survivor testimonies in the world: the so-called DEGOB protocols. The Jewish relief organization National Committee for Attending Deportees (Deportáltakat Gondozó Országos Bizottság –DEGOB) was set up in Budapest in the summer of 1945. In addition to aid and relief activity, DEGOB performed important documentary work as well. Its employees recorded the testimony of more than 5000 survivors (i.e., 2 percent of Jewish survivors) of the Hungarian Holocaust in 1945-1946. This is how a unique collection, consisting of approximately 10,000 pages of more than 3500 protocols that were recorded according to a standard questionnaire, came into being. The microfilmed collection holds predominantly the typed version of the protocols, but some has he original, shorthand versions.

The Hungarian Jewish Museum and Archives holds an extensive collection of approximately 7000 prisoner registry cards from Mauthausen. The cards contain detailed personal information of the prisoner: name, date of birth, place of birth, occupation, address, religion, citizenship, place of residence of relatives, and personal physical features. They also provide information on from where the prisoner was taken to Mauthausen and to what kommandos (work units) he/she was assigned. The collection holds the cards of only Hungarian inmates, and they are not exclusively, but predominantly Jews. The provenance of the material is unclear. The collection is arranged in loose alphabetic order.

This extensive collection was created by the Statistical Department of the Hungarian Representation of the World Jewish Congress (Zsidó Világkongresszus Magyarországi Képviseletének Statisztikai Osztálya) in the immediate post-war years in order to gather information on the victims. Gathering information from all kinds of sources, the Department created a database consisting of tens of thousands of cards. The cards contain the following information: the victim’s name, place of birth, date of birth, mother’s name, address, occupation, circumstances and location of death. The cards are arranged in very loose alphabetic order. Many cards have names on both sides, most of the time they are not from the same letter.

This collection contains the materials of approximately 600 former labor servicemen. It was created between 1945 and 1948 to certify the terms of service for those who performed labor service during WWII. The basic unit of the collection is a personal file of a former labor serviceman containing a wide array of documents: photographs, birth certificates, graduation certificates and diplomas, military papers (service certificates /szolgálati igazolvány/, letters of discharge /leszerelési jegy/, promotion certificates, soldier’s identity books), documents of name changes, deportation certificates, labor service post cards and correspondence between the labor serviceman and his family, certificates by fellow labor servicemen (bajtársi igazolás). Not all files contain all types of documents, but a majority of them contain several types.

XIX- Benoschofsky: Personal documentary bequests Documentary bequest of Ilona Benoschofsky (Személyes irathagyékok Benoschofsky Ilona irathagyatéka)

This collection consists of documents found in the documentary bequest of former Director of the Jewish Museum and Archives of Hungary Ilona Benoschofsky. Among other documents it contains the thus-far unknown “diary” of former Arrow Cross leader and “Leader of the Nation” Ferenc Szálasi. The document has been identified as original by experts. The handwritten text consists of 158 pages and 150 separate, numbered entries. The entries are not connected to days, though it is indicated when the entries were written: between September 15, 1943 and July 18, 1944. The content reflects the daily events only vaguely; the text is basically a series of “philosophical” thoughts on historical, social, economic and military questions. The notebook bears the indication “C”, and starts at page 335, therefore it is obvious that there were “A” and “B” notebooks as well. It has been known that Szálasi regularly authored “political notes”, but these have not been found until now. Another significant piece is a map, compiled most likely in November 1944 on the so-called international ghetto. The document indicates with house numbers the exact location of the buildings, and the neutral diplomatic corps that protected the given building.

-Notebook
The notebook contains entries regarding the daily operation of the Central Jewish Council between April 4 and December 2, 1944 (no date, after August 1946). The numbering runs from 1 to 6214. However, the notebook is clearly from the post-war era: on its cover the price is indicated in Forints, consequently it had to be produced after August 1946. Therefore it is either a hand-written copy of the Jewish Council’s original registry book, or a group of extensive and thorough notes made by someone who had access to the files of the Council.

-Pallium: [the pallium bears no inscription]
Blank relocation registration form (átköltöztetési bejelentőlap) issued by the Central Jewish Council, used at the June 1944 moving together of the Budapest Jews (June 1944)
The following material contains documents of the Jewish Council, predominantly from the ghetto-era. It contains extensive name lists, organizational documents, notes and reports regarding the daily operation of the ghetto and very precise accounts on the number of ghetto-tenants, the buildings, apartments and rooms of the ghetto. A xeroxed version of the body of documents was transferred to the Jewish Archives of Hungary from the Holocaust Memorial Center as a courtesy of Head of Collections László Csősz. The Holocaust Memorial Center has been in possession of the documents for years, but its origins are unclear. Probably it is the collection that was donated to Professor Szabolcs Szita by István Domonkos, the son of the de facto head of the ghetto, Miksa Domonkos. In the Jewish Archives of Hungary the copied documents were integrated into RG XX-A (Documents of the Central Council of the Hungarian Jews).
