SUMMARY: Naftali Lavie - from Piotrkow-Trybunalski, Poland. The son of the local rabbi, he was able to give accounts of events that few from his town were privy to, including the first reports from Chelmno, brought by the two Jews who managed to escape from there at the end of the 1942, and about the murders in the gassing vans. Afterwards, while in the labor camp in the town, supported his 7-year-old brother and helped him through all the tribulations of the war when he himself was only 17.
