

You were telling me about your religious beliefs today.

And how I'm trying to be tolerant. Not to be critical, but to be more tolerant to other people's faults. Because we are not perfect. We are striving for perfection, but it's rather difficult way for us. And I'm not going everyday to confession or everyday to communion, only once a year because I think it's too much to do it. There's always so much to do other. But as I say, my religious beliefs are showing that way that I'm trying to be understandable to other people, more understanding.

Were your attitudes different 40 years ago from those you hold today?

I don't think so. Maybe I was not going to church every day and it was sometimes rather difficult for the parents to get us kids on Sunday morning early to go to church. Maybe I didn't think it's so important to go to church. Even though I don't think it's so important to go to church, more important to do good deeds than to go to church. But if I have a possibility, I can go. I can worship God in His house.

Is there anything you can think of that we have not covered today that you would like to discuss?

Oh, I don't think you have.

OK. Thank you very much. This concludes our interview. I thank you for your participation.

Thank you, too.

This has been Beverly Kragen interviewing Halina Melnyczuk about her experience as a protector of the Nazi Holocaust.