

Francis Akos discusses living in a transit camp, Neuengamme; how music helped save his life in the camp; surviving the bombing of the ship, Caparkone; being a violinist for the British officers club; trying to survive in postwar Budapest, Hungary; living in Berlin, Germany; immigrating to the United States; his family life in Chicago; his feelings during his business trips back to Europe; his views on religion.