

Eliazak Lessing discusses the German invasion of Holland; going into hiding in Delft, Holland; difficulties in hiding; reuniting with his father and brothers in hiding; his mother's arrest and deportation to Bergen-Belsen; being liberated by Canadian forces; realizing the extent of the Holocaust; being reunited with his mother; joining a Zionist organization; working as a draftsman; immigrating to the United States; life in Schenectady, New York; anti-Semitism in the United States; getting married; going to Israel to live on a kibbutz; returning to live in Holland; returning to the United States; having children; getting involved with the Hidden Children Foundation; working for Steven Spielberg's Shoah Foundation; reuniting with people he met while in hiding; returning to Holland for a television program on the Holocaust; religion; his feelings on Israel; the benefits of therapy; and "adopting" a disabled survivor as a brother.