

Blanka Rothschild discusses working in a slave labor camp and her acts of sabotage; being beaten as ally forces entered Battenberg, the city of the labor camp; her difficult experiences during liberation; the behavior of Russian soldiers towards women; going back to Poland; Polish citizens' attitude towards returning Jews; traveling to Germany; daily life in Germany; immigrating to the United States; living with family members in Detroit; moving to New Jersey; her survivor's guilt; her religious identity; getting married and starting a family; how her wartime experiences affected the way she raised her daughter; her views on Israel; sharing her Holocaust experiences with groups of people; why it is important to speak out about the Holocaust; and her feelings on the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.