

Rose Warner discusses the various camps in which she was a prisoner, including Majdanek, Auschwitz-Birkenau, Ravensbrück, and Meyerhoff; the murder of her daughter in a camp; her liberation by the American Red Cross; traveling to Denmark; being taken care of by the Danish people; going to Sweden and being adopted by a Swedish couple; the poetry she wrote after the war; reuniting with her father, brother, and husband in Poland; having more children; her religious identity; moving to Israel; moving to Canada; immigrating to the United States; the tattoo she received in Auschwitz; her second marriage; being interviewed by the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum; the presence of the Ku Klux Klan in America; how her experiences during the Holocaust have affected her daily life; the importance of Holocaust remembrance; and her views on American politics.