

Norman Belfer discusses his prewar family life in Wodzislaw, Poland; life in Poland after the German invasion; his experiences in hiding in Krakow; staying in a displaced persons camp in Modena, Italy; traveling to Milan; daily life in Italy; learning of the fate of his family members who were taken to Auschwitz; his feelings towards the German people; his experiences traveling throughout Italy; religion; anti-Semitism; meeting his wife and getting married; immigrating to the United States; attending New York University; Israel and Israeli politics; the importance of Holocaust remembrance; speaking publicly about his experiences during the Holocaust; life in New York; his large family; returning to Poland; and joining the March of the Living to Auschwitz.