

Isaac Nehama discusses his prewar family life in Greece; the German invasion; going into hiding; returning to Athens after liberation; being reunited with his father; being arrested by the British for his partisan activities; his view of Greek Jews; traveling to the United States on the ship The Volcania; his life in Illinois; moving to New Jersey; becoming a American Citizen; meeting his first wife and getting married; being drafted into the Army; working for Bell Laboratories; American politics; returning to Europe; meeting his second wife and starting a family; moving to California; moving to Washington, D.C. to work on the Apollo program; founding the International Computing Company; Sephardim; contemporary Israel politics; and his volunteer work with the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum.